

Family History 101 — Handout 2

Tips for setting a solid foundation:

1. A source is a record (such as a census record, birth certificate, etc.) that is attached to an ancestor in your family tree. Sources are key—they validate an ancestor's existence.
2. Make sure that each ancestor has at least three sources attached.
3. Make sure everything later than the 1800's is accurate before going further back.

Family History 'To do' for the week:

Attach a source to an ancestor (even if they already have some sources attached).

"The Lord has provided ways for us to feel love in families that can continue forever."

—President Henry B. Eyring, July 2014 First Presidency Message

Family History 101 — Handout 2

Tips for setting a solid foundation:

1. A source is a record (such as a census record, birth certificate, etc.) that is attached to an ancestor in your family tree. Sources are key—they validate an ancestor's existence.
2. Make sure that each ancestor has at least three sources attached.
3. Make sure everything later than the 1800's is accurate before going further back.

Family History 'To do' for the week:

Attach a source to an ancestor (even if they already have some sources attached).

"The Lord has provided ways for us to feel love in families that can continue forever."

—President Henry B. Eyring, July 2014 First Presidency Message